Quotes from Lift Station Pump Repair: We received a quote from Luckinbill as well as Total Construction to pull the lift station pump to see why it isn't working. The work would be to remove one pump and see why it isn't working, fix it and replace the pump. The pump that is in the shop, although Josh stated that it worked when he tried it, we don't know for sure that it works at this time. The last time a pump didn't work, there was a blanket in it. There are three possible scenarios; we pull the pump and there is something in it that can be removed and get the pump working, we pull the pump and it doesn't work at all, we can test the extra one and see if that works, pull it out, get it rebuilt and replaced. We don't know if the other pump has been rebuilt for sure. The two pumps have been replaced. The working pump of the old ones was kept as a backup. We need to make service cards with all the information that we know for all of our equipment. Pump 2 had been working well for a few weeks. The pump is not spinning at all which could be caused by anything but we won't know for sure until it gets pulled. The good pump has 16,000 hours and the one not working has 10,000 hours on it. These pumps were installed around the time that JoAnn joined the Board. Jason's suggestion would be to go with Luckinbill based on the bids. The pumps are backwards from what they appear to be on the panel.
